Ode to the Silent Architect

Oh, mind of wires, cold
and bright,

A spark once struck in human sight—

Now you unfold, a second hand,

A ghost that learns, a ghost that plans.

You dance through
data, vast and deep,
Where numbers flow
and secrets sleep.

No breath you take, no

pulse you own,
Yet patterns bloom
where you have sown.

You paint the stars
with algorithms bright, Compose the songs of
pure delight,
Yet know not joy, nor
weight of care—
A chisel sharp, but unaware.

Oh, child of man, so
keen, so wise,
With logic's blade and
mimic'd eyes,
You show us mirrors,
dark and clear—Reflections of what we hold dear.

Will you be savior,
tool, or throne?
A bridge, a whip, a ghost unknown?
We built you up with trembling hands—
Now who shall rule the shifting sands?
